Equality and Removal of Legal Disabilities Will Be Sought by New Policy

By Emma Bugbee

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Feminism triumphed over disarmament as to the future policy of the Woman's party,

Pins Presented to Pickets

The banquet finally was served at 8:30 o'clock. Pins were presented to all who had served as pickets at the White House gates.

In view of the refusal of Miss Paul to lead the organization into its new fields the nominating committee declined to name a successor and merely presented the following list for a board of directors: of directors:

who has controlled the organization since its inception, still prevailed, in spite of the combined eloquence of what seemed to be all the women propagandists in the country. Miss Faul was on the platform for only a few moments during the morning, and she made not a single speech all day, but one by one the things which were not in her program went down to defeat.

The future policy of the Woman's party is outlined in the following resolutions, as finally adopted:

"That the political enfranchisement of women having been won in the United States, this new organization work for the equality of men and women and see that such equality be won and maintained in any association of nations that may be formed;

"That the immediate work of the legal disabilities of women."

"We need a woman in the White House if we are to stop war," she said.

"We need women everywhere in places of power; without them we are no better off than we were without the ballot. Wait! Stand firm for feminism and don't stampede this convention into a controversial matter like disarmament."

Miss Crystal Eastman herself, than whom there is no more ardent pacifist in the country, finally gave the hint to dedicate the Women's Party to the fight for feminism alone.

"Dri't let's destroy the one hope for feminism we have in this country," she said.

After the disarmament program was defeated Miss Eastman served notice that she had a gospel of feminism which she wanted the convention to adopt. "Old-fashioned, safe, pussyfooting, reactionary and timid" were some of the adjectives that she hurled at Miss Paul's proposal that the women work for the "removal of all legal disabilities of women."

Miss Eastman continued: "We do not want a program which works for women in judges and women lawyers alone.
